Choreographer Arja Tiili's latest work combines absurd and black humor with terror and horror. Deadly after Dark has been inspired by horror literature and movies, and it approaches the themes of terror and fear through gothic, romance, social taboos, madness and fairy tales. Movement vocabulary is created through the method of 'rewinding' – mixing up the alphabet and creating illogicality. Is there such a thing as illogical movement?

Arja Tiili is a productive and multitalented choreographer who often combines different genres and ideas in her work. She graduated as a dancer from the Swedish Balletschool in 1991 and has studied choreography at the Theatre Academy of Finland since 1999.
